

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a form of shorthand or a specific dialect. The text is arranged in approximately 12 horizontal lines, filling most of the page. The characters are dense and interconnected, characteristic of shorthand systems. The lines are roughly parallel and spaced evenly down the page.